Take it outside

With outdoor entertaining on the agenda, Andrea shares favourite wines for summer.

I've often thought that what makes anything suitable to the great outdoors is really just a matter of attitude. Well, that and the weather. Well, your attitude, the weather, food and the view. So, alfresco dining is a warm-weather activity and as such usually calls for certain styles of cooking; picnics, barbecues and casual platters. Wine-wise I'd tend toward food-friendly whites as well as lighter reds.

La Linea Rosé 2013, $21

A wonderful example of a modern Australian Rose, this wine is pale, dry and delicious. Brimming with wafts of red fruit, rosehip and a little spice, the wine is bone-dry with refreshing acidity to finish. Chill it down and drink it up.
